

It is absolutely absurd that you are considering allowing passenger use of cellular phones in the air. As a Flight Attendant I have been ignored and shooshed by passengers on the ground while trying to give important safety briefings. More often than not the only passengers that ignore and or break important FAA regulations do so because they were too busy talking on their cell phone to pay attention to important information. In the event of an emergency most if not all passengers would use their cell phones whether legal or not. Thank you, Denae Frederick
